A guide to the roles in Bankline

This document is designed to provide you with a clear understanding of the roles within Bankline. It gives a list of each role's access, giving all users a clear view of the access they have. Understanding roles is essential for maintaining security and transparency, as well as getting the most from Bankline, both from a user's perspective but also as an organisation. We'd recommend using these roles in the way that they're set up. However, if you find they're not quite right for you, then an administrative user can customise a role, which is tailored to your individual needs. Before we help with your admin query, we need to check which version of Bankline Administration you're using.

Important information

From the 27th August 2026 there are 2 versions of roles for Bankline, for you to get the correct information when you select the Admin menu, what do you see?

Roles (with a "New" label next to it), please see the roles described in pages 3 to 14.

Manage roles (with no "New" label), please refer to the roles described in pages 15 to 46.

Manage alerts

Role name	Description
Manage alerts	This allows users to nominate themselves or another user to receive email alerts for different Bankline events such as payments made, expired or rejected payments, changes made to bulk lists and templates. Users can also set an amount threshold for payments to meet before these alerts are sent. Note: The manage alerts role doesn't mean the user will get alerts. They would need to nominate themselves as the user to receive alerts.

Manage users

Role name	Description
Manage users	This allows the user to add, remove and edit all Bankline users' information and access. This includes the level of access users have, including themselves. They can also order activation codes, smartcards, smartcard readers and PINs. Note: This gives users no access to payments, account balances, transactions or statements.

Payment releaser

Role name	Description
Payment releaser	This is only needed if you have enabled the hold and release functionality in payment preferences. You will need at least one user to be able to release payments if you have customised your service so that some or all payments are 'held' after authorisation. It allows the user to release keyed and imported files of payments. The user can also see all payments. Note: They can't key or approve payments or see account balances, transactions or statements.

Note: * The account servicing privileges are automatically included with the 'View balances' or 'View transactions' privileges. This means when you check users access or role in Bankline, you will not see the account servicing privileges listed or ticked

Superuser FD & IAT (Future dated payments & transfers between accounts)

Role name	Description
Superuser FD & IAT (FD = Future dated payments IAT = transfers between accounts)	These users can key and maintain (edit) Faster Payments and transfers between your own accounts (IATs). They can use the file import function (excluding confidential and ad hoc bulk). They'll also be able to view these types of payments. Users can approve their own, and other users' single and bulk future-dated Faster Payments and transfers, including those that have been imported. They can create and edit bulk lists (excluding confidential bulk lists) and templates for Faster Payments and transfers (IATs). They can 'check' (2nd approve) bulk lists and templates if dual control for these is switched on. This also includes some privileges from administration, which mean they can add and remove users and accounts. They can also set and remove security settings. They also have privileges from audit, account information and account servicing. Users can view and cancel direct debits and standing orders. Note: It doesn't include any privileges for immediate and next day Faster Payments, or international and CHAPS payments.
